Will the Presidential Foreign Policy Debate touch the Energy Policy Question?

Presidential Debate Question on Energy Policy Answered by Rowdy House

STATELINE, Nev., Oct. 22, 2012 /PRNevswire/ — Every American's interest peaked during the second presidential debate when one questioner asked about rising gasoline prices. "Your energy secretary, Severo Chu, has now been on record three times stating its not the policy of his department here help lover gas prices. Do you agree with Sectled you Chu that his is not be policy of his department or help lover gas prices. Do you agree with Sectled you Chu that his is not the policy of his prices. Do you agree with Sectled representations and contained a dequately anywered the question.

The aptly timed song "Energy Policy" answers the town hall debate question. It highlights the fact that current policy does not prioritize and profability and as result, today's bull prices negatively impact just about everyone. The Rowdy House Music releases "Energy Policy" relies on regige tradition to deliver its discussion on U.S. energy policy - which is impacted by foreign policy - the subject of the third presidential debate on October 22. "Energy Policy" is playing on stations nationwide.

America's energy policy has been "practicality challenged" by China's pursuit of oil which is undercutting U.S. security interests and economic future on multiple fronts. China needs a lot of energy because Americans buy so many products from them. That's also why China is the largest foreign holder of US debt, its oil consumption grows seven three faster than the U.S., and its growth projections are of the chartons are of the chartons.

Sustaining an extremely high level of economic growth may be necessary to contain civil unrest in China, even though they continue to suppress dissenting opinions and human rights violations are widespread. China has more people than any other country on the planet. And while high gasoline prices have Americans transitioning from acras to bicycles, the Chinase are transitioning from bicycles to cars. In a few decades, China will have more cars on its roads than there are cars on the planet today. Therefore, they want more oil.

While Americans are questioning US Energy Policy in the 2012 Presidential Election Debates, and asking if their government is doing anything to help lower gas prices. China has been working diligently to secure its energy future. They have been aggressive in the South China Sea which is nich in oil and gas, but their ownership is displaced. In addition, China has also been asserble in securing reserves around the world.

China has been securing oil reserves in the American market proximity, which will force the U.S. to seek more oil from the Middle East. China's arms sales to the region and its support of state sponsors of terrorism are highly troubling. With radical islamic ideologies gaining a controlling bothoid and anti-American violence threatening American presence in the Middle East, the price of of will be going up, and the 2012 Fresteefintal Election Debates will be hard.

threadening American presence in the Middle East, the price of oil will be going up, and the 2012 Presidential Election Debates will be healing up.

Will the Energy Policy question be answered in the context of the broader Presidential Foreign Policy Debate? Adding an extra dimension on the Saturday before the final debate on foreign policy, the Obama administration commanded a US carrier group on a mission to cruse though the disputed South China Sea. Tensions may be up the final Foreign Policy question. But the question on everyone's mind each time they fit up the tanks; will be able to allow the time?

The Energy Policy question. But the question on everyone's mind each time they fit up the tanks; will be able to allow that time?
